Slow Down And Savor What's Left Of Summer

Here we are at the beginning of the last full month of summer. It should not really surprise us, happens the same way every year, summer flies by in a blink. I hope you have made it a good one spent doing things you love with those you love.

It is not too late to participate in lots of great summer activities and we have all the details you will need to enjoy your favorites in this issue.

First up is an event technically sliding into fall but who is keeping track? We have all you need to know about the 47th Annual Warrens Cranberry Festival. It is an entire weekend of events and activities celebrating what is arguably Wisconsin's favorite fruit.

Contributor Peter Lindblad submits two great interviews for this issue. The first, our cover story on Comedian John Caparulo who will appear for a 3-date run at The Skyline Comedy Club in Appleton next month.

On the music side, his interview this month is with guitarist and vocalist Van Temple of The Producers before their appearance in Wisconsin Dells at an 80s In The Dells Weekend. A festival put on by Crystal Grand Theater packed with performances by 80s favorite acts.

Supper Club Guy David Brierley takes us to Spring Green's Arthur's Supper Club with a medieval theme and lot of interesting and unique features that may surprise you. In case you are wondering, no moat but there is a drive-thru.

We also have our wrap-up of summer's last hurrah. If you are a fair fan this story is for you as we have details for more than a dozen of fairs in August for your summer enjoyment. If you are a real fair fan, you may want to consider it a checklist.

Finally, our events calendar includes more than 100 listings of things to do in Wisconsin this month with live links so details are just a click away.

So, read this issue, then turn off your device and get out and savor the rest of your Wisconsin summer.

47TH ANNUAL

Warren's Cranberry Festival

As submitted by Warrens Cranberry Festival

Warrens, the “Cranberry Capital of Wisconsin,” is a small village, population 400, located in the northeastern corner of Monroe County. Warrens is also host to the annual World’s Largest Cranberry Festival and 2019 marks the 47th celebration! The Festival is perhaps best known for its shopping and boasts 850 arts & crafts booths (unusual works of art), 350 flea & antique booths (primitives, pottery and antiques), 100 farm market booths (fresh fall produce) and 100 food vendors that make for a three-mile shopping extravaganza!

Forty-seven years ago a small group of people sat down to discuss the idea of having a cranberry festival in the Village of Warrens. These people had a vision, filled with ideas; of cranberry royalty, a parade, horse show, and farmer’s market and so the first festival was planned. It was held in early October and approximately 3,500 people attended. Now, 46 years later, attendance has grown to more than 130,000 visitors each year. The Festival brings in excess of $4 million per year, contributing to the local economy and benefiting the travel and tourism industry. From the beginning the purpose of the Festival was to raise funds to improve the quality of life in the Village of Warrens. The Festival’s focus is to donate to community organizations, including schools, fire departments, Lions Clubs and scout/youth groups.

Over the past 46 years, the Festival has donated more than $3 million to such organizations and will continue to fulfill that vision and mission. The Festival is a nonprofit organization that solely benefits the community of Warrens and surrounding area.

On Friday and Saturday guests may purchase cranberry marsh tour tickets for $6 per person and children 4-11 $4. The tour will take a little over an hour. The tours are organized by volunteers and their families with multiple generations and years of experience in the cranberry growing industry. Guests get an up-close-and-personal look at an actual cranberry marsh and learn about the history of the cranberry and its production in the area. Purchase your tickets early, as the marsh tours often sell out by noon. The Marsh Tour Bus Guides and helpers are dedication and devoted to the Festival and the cranberry industry. These individuals are committed to educating visitors on the production of cranberries, our indigenous state fruit. Tour guides have ranged in age from teenagers to senior citizens and multiple families have supported the marsh tours for three generations, grooming tour guides at a young age. The Marsh Tour volunteers greet visitors, sell tickets, give directions, answer questions and guide guests on a one-of-a-kind tour.

On Friday and Saturday the Cranberries Jubilee Giant Fry Pan will be available. Thirty years ago a tradition began and it's been called many things "the giant fry pan" and "Bucky Badger Sundaes" but most everyone knows it as "Cranberries Jubilee". It is one of the most sought after attractions and people stand in line for hours waiting to purchase the warm cranberry mixture that is served over ice cream. The 4½ foot spun aluminum skillet is lined with Silverstone® by Regal Ware and has 4½ foot handle. All of the preparation is done over a propane burner. “To make dessert for 100 people all you do is mix up three quarts of water, five pounds of Wisconsin cranberries and five pounds of sugar.” “Serve it over ice cream and you’ve got a delicious dessert that’s fit for the Cranberry Festival!”

The Festival also features a variety of other contests including the Button Design for the 2020 Festival, Photography, Pictorial Cancellation, Biggest Berry, Be Our Guest (dress up in crazy costumes,) Marsh Medallion Hunt and a Cranberry Chiffon Pie Eating Contest. A variety of prizes can be won, from blue ribbons to gift certificates and cash.

Other highlights at this year’s Festival include a wide range of entertainment offered at the Festival. Guests will find an assortment of activities, including strolling entertainment, singing and dancing and much more. If you are hungry be sure to visit the food booths, there are over 100 of them! Guests can enjoy American, Greek, Chinese, Italian, and Mexican cuisines and of course don’t forget the cranberries! Be sure to sample a Cranberry Cream Puff, Cranberry covered cheesecake and deep-fried cranberries on a Stick!

The gigantic parade is on Sunday at 1:00 p.m. It is known as one of the largest marching band parades in the area. There are a variety of units in the parade, including various royalty, classic automobiles, horses, tractors and floats. This year the Parade Marshalls will be the Warrens VFW. They have been involved through many generations. ■ O&A

John Caparulo

Dressed for success

BY PETER LINDBLAD

No stranger to menial labor, as his standard everyman outfit of a t-shirt with jeans and a baseball cap would imply, comedian John Caparulo used to wonder when he'd catch a break.

Originally from Ohio, he worked as a doorman at the Comedy Store in Hollywood and as a groundskeeper, before going on to bigger and better things, like his current headlining residency at Harrah's in Las Vegas and appearing as Chelsea Handler's righthand man on the E! talk show "Chelsea Lately." Getting through long work days was tough.

"Both situations were like most everything else in the life of a comedian," said Caparulo. "It sucks going through it. But then one day it magically turns into comedy."

Nothing could have prepared him for that doorman's job.

"Working the door at The Comedy Store is kind of a badge of honor, and I'll always have a special place in my heart for anyone else I see paying those dues," said Caparulo.

"It really does test your resolve while it's happening, and there were times for me working the door that just felt hopeless. But it turned out to be like boot camp. It toughened me up and prepared me for everything that followed. I can't thank Mitzi Shore (the co-founder and eventual owner of The Comedy Store) enough for giving me a space and an opportunity to live my dream."

Leaving Las Vegas, if only for a short while, Caparulo will be performing at the Skyline Comedy Club in Appleton Sept. 12, 13 and 14. He's convinced that audiences aren't any different in the Midwest than they are anywhere else.

"They usually play better defense," joked Caparulo. "But seriously folks, there really isn't that much of a difference from one region of the country to the next. People who support live comedy are generally more easygoing and open-minded, regardless of where they might live. That's not to say that I haven't run into my fair share of jackasses, who just can't handle the idea of a comedian telling a joke that might contradict their own personal beliefs or sensibilities. But that sort of thing could pop up anywhere. In a way, it's one of the beautiful things about life – there are jerks everywhere."

That could be the case in East Liverpool, Ohio, where Caparulo grew up, and everywhere else he's ever lived or visited. A graduate of Kent State University in 1998, Caparulo began his stand-up career scrounging for laughs in nightclubs around Cleveland and Pittsburgh, before heading out to California and taking jobs at the Comedy Store and a local golf course.

As far as his upbringing goes, Caparulo came from humble beginnings. Comedy was not a family pursuit.

"Being the funniest person in my family wasn't exactly a difficult race to win," said Caparulo. "By that, I mean I seemed to be the only one who cared to define himself in that way. But despite not being comedians themselves, everyone in my nuclear family had a good sense of humor. We were lower middle class and nothing ever came easy for us. It still doesn't really. But using comedy as a coping mechanism is something I picked up on longer ago than I can even remember. And I guess there is an empowerment that comes with the knowledge that I'm able to take all of my ups and downs in life and somehow synthesize them into laughter."

In most ways, Caparulo is still the same smart, funny and at times, brutally honest observational stand-up comic he's always been, but he's not sure he's always been a natural at it.

"It kinda depends on how you define the term 'natural,' as it pertains to stand-up comedy," said Caparulo. "I guess I've always had a reasonable understanding of timing and delivery, and it didn't take me very long to 'find my voice' so to speak. But I've always considered the practice of walking onstage and venting my own frustrations and insecurities in an effort to make a bunch of strangers laugh to be a fairly unnatural activity."

Nonetheless, Caparulo is well-suited for it. Maybe he is a natural after all.

"I've always been proud of the fact that I'm genuinely representing myself onstage, but I'm equally as proud that I've been able to grow and evolve as a person without losing that quality," said Caparulo. "For the first half of my career, I was very single (as in lonely single) and also pretty petite if I do say so myself. But I've been able to successfully evolve into the fat, married dad you see today without losing a step artistically. I probably shouldn't be proud of that, but I am."

Everything changed for Caparulo in 2003, with an appearance at Canada's Just For Laughs festival in

JOHN CAPARULO

Sept. 12, 13, 14

Skyline Comedy Club
in Appleton

Montreal. He almost didn't get on the bill.

"It was a big deal back then, but it's basically a footnote now," said Caparulo. "At the time, I was still cutting grass at a golf course in order to pay rent. When they announced the list of 20 names for their 'New Faces' show, I wasn't on it. A few days later, I found out that JFL had agreed to add me as 21st participant for that year. Fox signed me to a couple of development deals after the festival, but nothing ever materialized. I was able to quit cutting grass though."

"Chelsea Lately" premiered in 2007 and ran until 2014. Caparulo was a round table regular on the show, along with the likes of Chris Hardwick, Kevin Hart, Ron Funches, Jo Koy, Loni Love and Natasha Leggero, among others. Caparulo and Handler go way back, and they always had a good rapport on the show.

"Chelsea and I used to perform in the same show every Friday night in the Belly Room at the Comedy Store," said Caparulo. "I always thought she was funny, and I think she thought I was funny. So, fortunately, when they were putting her show together, Chelsea remembered me. As far as chemistry is concerned, she has a very strong presence about herself. Chelsea is very confident and quick-witted. And those factors were just enough to scare me into saying something funny whenever she looked over at me. I also can't thank Chelsea enough for that opportunity. Well, I guess maybe I can. Probably why she doesn't answer my calls anymore."

Caparulo is kidding about that last part. More seriously, Caparulo announced on the show's Nov. 4, 2010 episode that he had proposed to Jamie Marie Kelly, after he'd performed at the Comedy & Magic Club in Hermosa Beach, California. Four years later, during their "Domestic Disputes" podcast, Jamie revealed that they were having a child. Madden Jae was born in 2015.

That's had an effect on the material he writes.

"I write a lot more material about being a husband and father, now that I'm no longer single and childless," said Caparulo. "My wife and I are different in more ways than we are similar. She's beautiful, energetic, organized and adventurous. I'm a fat, lazy slob who likes to stay in the house. Yep, she's a lucky girl."

Caparulo lived in the Los Angeles area for 18 years, but the family moved to Las Vegas a year ago when he started his Harrah's residency. His career has been an adventure, with spots on "The Tonight Show" and featured turns on the "Blue Collar Comedy Tour: The Next Generation" and "Vince Vaughn's Wild West Comedy Tour."

"The BCC thing was more of a comedy special than a tour," said Caparulo. "I think we only did maybe three tour dates with that group after the TBS premiere. So, there really isn't much to tell there. Before the 'Wild West Tour,' I didn't think I'd enjoy spending 30 days on a bus with four other dudes. I was right about that."

Caparulo also hosted "Mobile Home Disaster" on the CMT network, and he's done some acting, having played Brian in the ABC sitcom "Work It." It didn't have much of a run.

"Acting is ok, but I've realized over the years that I'm more comfortable delivering lines that I wrote myself," said Caparulo.

That's clear from watching Caparulo's stand-up act, where his infectious laugh and engaging, comfortable delivery masks a no-holds-barred approach that doesn't avoid controversy. His onstage personality isn't much different from how he is off it. His fans seem to appreciate that about him.

"Yeah, early on in my comedy career, I was always a bit surprised how many people actually thought I was playing a character onstage," said Caparulo. "I know I'm always disappointed to find out my favorite artist or entertainer isn't who I thought they were, so my fans probably do appreciate that. If anything, I'm only playing a more exaggerated version of myself up there."

Still, Caparulo isn't always calm, cool and collected before hitting the stage.

"The way I feel before a show is an adrenaline rush of excitement and fear," said Caparulo. "I generally try to harness the excitement and leave the fear behind me. The excitement makes my voice a bit louder and my senses a bit sharper. That's why I've been able to write most of my best material onstage, because that excited feeling enables me to be my most creative self in that moment. The fear just gives me diarrhea."

Evidently, he's able to get over it, having recorded a special for Comedy Central called "John Caparulo: Meet Cap" that aired Dec. 21, 2008. It was released on CD in 2009.

Caparulo has hosted "The Mad Cap Hour" radio show with his wife and comedian Mark Ellis on Sirius XM, while also providing the voice for the Headphone Joe character on Disney's "Fish Hooks."

More recently, in 2014, Caparulo began making the innovative "Caplets," which featured fresh comedic material in a whole new format.

"After producing two full-length comedy specials and one half-hour comedy special, I really wanted to try something different," said Caparulo. "I felt (and still feel) like the conventional comedy special format has grown stale. I also hated hearing my act chopped up into random segments for comedy radio and so forth. Plus the internet has made it almost impossible to craft a 60-minute special over a couple years' time to produce another special. So, I thought it would be kinda cool to put more comedy out more often by essentially recording a series of mini-specials, once every 30 days, of all-new material.”

It was a different, bite-sized delivery method that made perfect sense to Caparulo in trying to appeal to today’s audiences.

“That way, I could put out more material more often and also package them in a way that is better-suited for the way most people watch and listen to comedy now,” said Caparulo. “It’s pretty much like producing singles rather than albums. We ended up producing 44 ‘Caplets’ in all, and we’re still hoping to eventually resume the series. In retrospect, I think ‘Caplets’ has been received exactly the way I had initially hoped it would. People slowly gravitated to it more and more over time. So by the time it really caught on, there was already a sufficient body of work available for them to watch.”

At 10 p.m. every night, except Tuesdays, you can catch Caparulo at Harrah’s.

“I’m really determined to make that a success because I love being able to perform for a different crowd every night without getting on an airplane,” joked Caparulo.

Besides that, Caparulo is still trying to turn the old stand-up comedy formula on its head with another project.

“Even more importantly, we’re launching a Kickstarter campaign in September to generate funding for my next comedy special. It’s called CARTOON COMIC,” said Caparulo. “It’ll be 70-90 minutes long, half live action stand-up and half animation. My goal is to produce a completely one-of-a-kind comedy special and then hopefully build off its success to produce CARTOON COMIC, the animated series. I’ve been writing and developing this concept for over 5 years now. It is essentially ‘Seinfeld’ meets ‘Family Guy’ as it follows the hilarious misadventures of cartoon me and my cartoon family. We’ve even managed to self-publish three issues of a comic book series under the same title with a fourth issue currently in production.”

All joking aside, there’s a more important role, however, waiting for him at home.

“Beyond that, I’m just trying to be a halfway decent dad for my 4-year-old daughter while my wife and I try our best to give her the best life we possibly can,” said Caparulo. ■ O&AW

Arthur's Supper Club

Medieval dining in Spring Green.

BY DAVID BRIERLEY

Just north of the heart of the small town of Spring Green, right off of Highway 14, sits a long, low building with a stone facade. In the middle, next to the entrance door, is a stone tower topped by a sloping roof, somewhat reminiscent of a castle.

In fact, just below the roofline is a suit of armor. Hmm... quite castle-like indeed.

You're about to learn what this place is all about and just how medieval it is. You've arrived at Arthur's Supper Club.

As you head inside, you'll find yourself facing the host station, with the main bar area on your left, and one of the dining rooms to the right. Everywhere you look, you'll see suits of armor, family crests on shields, and other medieval decor.

Check in with the host, then take a seat at the bar and order one of several varieties of old fashioned drinks on the drink menu (they're all good, trust me). Bar service is prompt, friendly, and attentive, and the bar area itself is attractive and comfortable. The ceiling is tin, the bar is wood, the seating is plentiful, and the lighting is just right for a supper club.

Once you've worked up an appetite and your table is ready, you will be led back to a seat in one of the dining rooms. As you're walking through to your table, you'll realize how truly large this place is. With multiple dining rooms, outdoor patio seating (complete with several fire pits), and a second bar, it seems as though Arthur's could seat the entire town of Spring Green, and then some.

Each dining room is relatively mid-size, giving the restaurant an intimate feeling no matter where you are seated. The most interesting area, by far, is the back bar area and dining room. This room has a two-story high ceiling, a huge rock waterfall with a fire feature, and a countryside mural painted on the walls, complete with a castle in the distance. It's very cool, and definitely makes Arthur's worth checking out. Also, the food is fantastic, but more on that later.

The adjoining dining room, which has windows looking into the waterfall room, has tables in the middle and booths around the outside. Oddly (and delightfully), each booth has its own television screen. Clearly this is not your ordinary everyday supper club.

The menu brings you back to reality with lots of supper club favorites. Appetizers such as cheese curds (they're real and they're spectacular), shrimp cocktail, fried mushrooms, and onion rings are all present and accounted for. Throw in chicken tenders, fried pickles, fresh walleye strips, and potato skins, and there's an option for everyone.

Main courses include a great selection of steaks (including a prime rib buffet once a month), seafood offerings (I'm looking at you, all-you-can-eat fish and chicken dinner every Friday), pork, chicken, pasta, wraps, and sandwiches.

Speaking of sandwiches, one stands out from the rest on the menu at Arthur's: the king burger. Weighing in at a whopping 1 pound, this burger comes with its own challenge. Finish the burger, bun, toppings, side of fries, and your drink, and you'll win a t-shirt and your name will be listed on the king burger challenge poster.

In addition to the prime rib buffet the first Monday of the

THE HISTORY OF ARTHUR'S

As told by the supper club's website.

Originally a truck stop, the Arthur's property was purchased from Earl Hill by Gene and Eleanor Rock in May 1946. The Rocks continued to run the truck stop until 1951, when they sold it to Richard and Iris Umhoefer from Plain, Wisconsin, who changed it to a Shell truck stop.

In late 1955, the Umhoefers built a new truck stop with showers, bunk beds, and a lounge with a television for the truckers, and on the west side of the property, a modern new restaurant opened with Louella Sprecher as manager. The grand opening was in February 1956, and the new building was called The Truck-O-Tel.

The building continued as a truck stop until January 1966 when the showers, bunk beds, and lounge were remodeled and changed to a 21-year-old liquor bar called The Black Watch Cocktail Lounge. This was managed by the future owner of the building, Art Baryenbruch.

In January 1967, an 18-year-old bar called The Kiltie was opened in the east part of the building on weekends only. This lasted only a few months before it was turned back into a full time restaurant.

In January 1968, it became a true supper club when Dan Wiedenfeld opened what was called Mr. D's Steakhouse. He ran it until June 1973. It was then closed for a couple of weeks, and reopened under new management. After a contest, the name was changed to House O' Steaks.

In July 1976, Art and Shirley Baryenbruch bought the business from the Umhoefers. This is when the name of the business became Arthur's - The Place for Steaks. The Baryenbruchs continued to operate the month and the all-you-can eat fish Fridays, Arthur's also offers a lobster lovers feast the fourth Wednesday of the month, October through May. How can you go wrong with lobster?

Side dishes are numerous at Arthur's. Options range from french fries, to the vegetable of the day, garlic mashed potatoes, baked potato, homemade hashbrowns (I highly recommend asking for them "loaded"), onion rings, potato skins, side salad, sweet potato fries, cheese curds (as a side? Heck yes.), or a twice baked potato.

Oh, and one important detail: they have a salad bar. The supper club classic feature is alive and well at Arthur's, offering plenty of toppings, delicious soups, garlic bread, and even pudding (you know I love my sweets).

Arthur's also has a "Little Arthur" kids menu, and a dessert menu with a bunch of tempting options, plus dessert drinks (obviously).

If you live nearby and don't feel like getting dressed up to dine in, Arthur's offers something I've never seen before at a supper club: a drive-through window.

The drive-through offers burgers and prime rib sandwiches daily, and specials throughout the week. Delicious supper club food with the convenience of never having to leave your car? That's kind of cool.

This southwestern part of the state, also known as the driftless area for its lack of glacial activity during the last ice age, is known for its beautiful landscapes and idyllic small towns. If you haven't visited, I would highly recommend it. And while you're there, you should definitely be sure to add Arthur's to your list.

If you haven't already, don't forget to join our Supper Club VIP group; you'll be entered in our monthly drawing for a $50 gift card to an area supper club. As always there will be plenty more Supper Club fun to come.

supper club until November 1983, when they sold it to the former bar manager, Gerald (Jerry) Fitzgerald. Barb Fitzgerald, Jerry's sister, joined the business and continued to run it until 1986 when she purchased Arthur's from her brother.

In December 1995, Barb sold the restaurant to John and Mary Pat Kaul. The Kauls did a full remodel, adding a drive-through, a large dance floor, and a banquet hall. They also doubled the number of tables in the main dining area. Arthur's now features indoor and outdoor waterfalls and seating, a drive-through famous for Friday fish fries, a lounge that hosts live bands with "the largest TVs in town," and a banquet area for 300+ guests.

In 2010, Jack and Jennifer Coppernoll (one of the Kauls; daughters and her husband) began running the business. The family runs the business along with The Round Barn Lodge, The White House Ramada, and other properties.

The family strives to provide the best possible services to their guests, and also supports the local communities. In 2016, they started the Kaul Cares Program, designed to give back. The family and team are committed to making a difference through volunteering, donations, and support of local nonprofits focusing on autism and cancer programs.

The Producers

MTV favorites find new life

BY PETER LINDBLAD

The timing couldn't have been better. MTV was still new and getting its sea legs just as a buzz was starting to get around about The Producers.

Soon, the MTV boom would completely alter the landscape of music marketing, replacing radio as the dominant vehicle for breaking up-and-coming acts into the mainstream.

With their clean-cut looks and catchy blend of pristine new wave and irresistible power pop, The Producers – already a live sensation in the Southeastern region of the United States – seemed poised to ride the music-video wave all the way to the top.

“We did a couple of videos at a college up there,” said guitarist and vocalist Van Temple. “I think we did ‘What’s He Got’ and ‘Certain Kinda Girl’ I think. It was great.

We got along with the MTV crew, and Martha (Quinn), and ... I can't remember one of the guys' names, but we hung out with them some, and eventually, we ended up playing the second MTV New Year's Eve Ball. That was our 15 minutes of fame right there."

Their time in the sun has been extended. Although commercial success eluded them for the most part, despite headlining 1982's 2nd Annual MTV New Year's Eve Rock and Roll Ball and seeing their early '80s single "What She Does to Me" rise to No. 61 on the Billboard singles charts, it seems The Producers are experiencing a bit of a renaissance.

"Yeah, I think so," said Temple. "We played Chattanooga (Tennessee) last weekend and just had a great response. Everyone who was there, they were dancing and singing our lyrics; it was just a really good show ... our performances I think are as good as we used to do and we're playing more dates and more festivals this year than we have in a few years. Yeah, I think our shows have improved."

There's an important one coming up for fans in Wisconsin and the Midwest, as The Producers are scheduled to be part of the two-day "80's in the Dells" event, hosted by the Crystal Grand Music Theatre in Wisconsin Dells. They will be playing the Outdoor Stage on Saturday, Aug. 17 along with the Sugarhill Gang, Tone-Loc and Taylor Dane. Asia and former Foreigner vocalist Lou Gramm will be performing on the Indoor Stage that night.

The first day of the "80's in the Dells" extravaganza takes place

Friday, Aug. 16, with Hericane Alice opening things up on the Outdoor Stage, followed by Kip Winger and Jack Russell's Great White. Lita Ford and Poison's Bret Michaels will take to the Indoor Stage in the evening.

For The Producers, it's another chance to win over new converts and satisfy those whose loyalty has never wavered. That the band, with all of its original members, is still able to perform is something they don't take for granted.

"Well, I mean, we know our parts, we know our songs ... we don't jump around as much, but I try to," said Temple, with a laugh. "It's like we're brothers in arms and we love each other."

Those bonds of friendship have been tested over the years. It all started in Atlanta, Georgia, as The Producers – featuring Temple, bassist and vocalist Kyle Henderson, Wayne Famous on keyboards and Bryan Holmes on drums and vocals – grew out of a Beatles cover band called Cartoon.

"Wayne and I, the keyboard player and I, were playing in a cover band backing up a singer, and then ... we changed our name to Cartoon and we started doing our own music, mixed in with covers," Temple explained. "We added Bryan, as our drummer, and played some shows with him, and then sometime after that, Kyle the bass player wanted to join the band. So, he joined and when he did that, we changed our name from Cartoon to The Producers."

Temple can't recall how The

Producers name originated, saying that Wayne Famous came up with it. Even before Cartoon, Temple had been writing songs with other bands, and Henderson had previously been in a group called Whiteface and was a songwriter.

“He and I got together at my house and started working on new songs for The Producers, and sometimes Wayne might bring in a musical idea and Bryan might bring in some lyrics and titles for songs, and we just hashed it out after hours and hours of rehearsals,” said Temple.

Those sessions proved fruitful, as audiences in nightclubs around the Atlanta area couldn't get enough of The Producers' sound. Others were keeping an eye on them, including famed producer Tom Werman, who had worked with Cheap Trick and REO Speedwagon, among others.

“I first met him in New York,” recalled Temple. “We were playing at a club somewhere in Florida and our manager called us up and said, ‘Get back home. You need to fly to New York. You're going to do an audition for Tom Werman,’ who was not only a record producer but he was an A&R guy for a record company. So, we got up to New York, rented a studio/rehearsal hall and had equipment brought in, and we started playing a set of original music, and after three songs, Tom Werman leaned over to our manager and said, ‘I'm going to sign them.’”

True to his word, Werman with us, and saw some other bands that we liked roaming around the halls. We just had a really great time.”

Then it was time to get to work. The Producers released two albums for Portrait, including 1981's self-titled LP and 1982's You Make the Heat. That first record yielded “What She Does to Me,” as well as “What's He Got,” “Certain Kinda Girl” and “Who Do You Think You Are” – songs that were made into videos that had some popularity, but never charted.

Enthusiastic about The Producers' sound, Werman ran a tight ship in the studio and put his stamp on the band's recordings.

“He was a great guy and when the band would start arguing about how to do something on a song, he would just say, ‘Shut up. I'm producing this. Listen to me. This is what we're going to do,’” said Temple.

Making that first record was an eye-opening experience.

“We did some of the tracks in Atlanta and ... we drove out in a couple of vans to Los Angeles,” remembered Temple. “That was a long, long drive, and we recorded at the Record Plant, which is a real famous studio out there. There were other groups recording there, like Fleetwood Mac. They were in a different studio, and I saw Rod Stewart out there, with some really big inked them to a deal with the CBS subsidiary Portrait Records.

“We were extremely excited to go up to New York and they picked us up in a limousine,” said Temple. “And we went to the CBS Studios and got to meet everyone, people that would be working people. And so we started laying down our finishing tracks.”

When “What She Does to Me” reached No. 61 on the Billboard singles charts, it appeared that everything was coming up roses.

“We had an independent promoter, who went to jail later ... so he started doing whatever he does at record stations, and that’s when it got on the Billboard charts,” said Temple. “I think it ended up at No. 60 or 61, and for some reason, I don’t know why, we pulled a bunch of money out of our recording budget to buy a truck and a van to start touring in, and that’s when the thing fell out of the Top 100 charts.”

Still, at least for a little while, Temple and the rest of the band got to enjoy their good fortune.

“Oh yeah, we sure did,” said Temple. “I would get to be riding around town and someone would have the radio on and I’d hear my song, and I’d kind of look over at them and smile and just bask in the glory.”

Relentless touring with the likes of Cheap Trick and The Motels, as well as Toto and Hall and Oates, gave the band even more thrills.

“Oh, it was fantastic,” said Temple. “One of my favorite tours was with Squeeze. We did a thing with Squeeze and I think Flock of Seagulls, but I really enjoyed Squeeze a lot and I got to meet some other rock ‘n roll people who had come out to see them, and that was a great tour, I thought. The Toto stuff was really fun, too, and we opened up two or three times for U2.”

That night performing at MTV’s New Year’s Eve Rock and Roll Ball at the conclusion of 1982 was an even bigger highlight, even if it was somewhat nerve-wracking.

“The thing I remember most about it is, Martha Quinn ... someone told her we were prepared to go on,” said Temple. “We still had 10 or 15 minutes and we were up in the dressing room and they announced us, and we had to run downstairs. I didn’t even have a guitar pick on me and ... I think I was pretty much in tune, but it was a like panic moment. That’s what I remember most about it.”

Making videos was a tiring job, according to Temple.

“Well, those first two videos went pretty quickly, and the ‘She Sheila’ video ... we did a scene or two of the whole band, and then the rest of it was just me and it took like it seemed like two or three days to do it,” said Temple. “And it’s pretty exhausting work to do one of those – singing along with the song and getting it synced up, and just deciding what you’re going to wear and how you’re going to play the song out on video.”

Despite having a grab bag of accessible, radio-friendly songs, The Producers’ prospects started to dim. The video for “She Sheila,” off the You Make the Heat album, was a favorite among MTV viewers, but it wasn’t selling. Portrait would soon drop the band.

“Well, what happened with that was, they released ‘She Sheila’ and it didn’t do well on the charts and the band asked Portrait to rerelease it [and] put some more money into it, so it would do well on the charts. And this wasn’t me, it was other people in the band that said, ‘Well, either rerelease it and put some money into it or we want out of our contract,’ so they said, ‘Bye,’” said Temple. “We didn’t get signed again for ... god, I don’t know, three or four years? We did a record for MCA and it got dropped before it came out.”

In 1987, The Producers released a third record, Run for Your Life, on their own label, before signing with MCA to do a fourth album, Coelacanth, which fell victim to corporate restructuring at the label. Its release was put off, and The Producers eventually put out themselves.

Temple has some regrets about leaving Portrait.

“I think maybe if we’d stayed with Portrait, maybe something could have happened. We would have done more albums,” said Temple.

Things then unraveled. There was a lineup change and a breakup, but eventually, the whole unit reunited.

“Kyle left the group after the second record, so we hired a bass player (Tim Smith) out of Baton Rouge, Louisiana, who we did our MCA record with, and it got to a point where the band just broke up,” said Temple. “We couldn’t get any bookings or anything and then, we did get some bookings, we got some good bookings for a while, but anyway, Tim went on to join Jellyfish. I had turned him onto them. He went on to audition with them, and so, then Kyle came back and we had the original lineup. And we’ve played shows the past four or five years I guess and this year is picking up. We’re playing more dates than we have in several years, so that’s good.”

The “80’s in the Dells” festival features a whole host of acts that made a name for themselves that decade. Temple can’t wait to see them all.

“I’ll have fun playing and watching some of the other acts,” said Temple. “That’s something to look forward to.”

Summer Fairs

Long-Standing Traditions Remind us Of Our Past

BY MIKE JACQUART

In today's largely urban, technological day and age, rural county fairs might seem like summer relics of the past. Actually, I think that makes them more valuable than ever. In an era when it seems like things are changing faster than the glance it takes to look down at our smart phones, there is something to be said for tradition.

Close your eyes, and you won't have any trouble conjuring up fun memories: Children going around and around on the Tilt-A-Whirl. 4-H youth proudly showing their prize-winning animals. Cars crashing head-on during demolition derbies or the soothing sounds of a great music band. Last, but certainly not least, who could overlook delicious treats like cotton candy, funnel cakes, and cheeseburgers?

While fairs are a lot of fun, they offer a lot more than great entertainment. Fairs and livestock exhibitions promote the importance of agriculture in Wisconsin and the financial impact the dairy and other ag industries have on the state. They also offer opportunities for adult and youth education, such as demonstrating a newly developed skill or project, or showing off a culinary treat you just perfected.

Yes, there's something for everyone at a fair. But don't take my word for it, check out the Wisconsin State Fair and the variety of county fairs coming up in August and early September.

Food, Rides, Exhibitions, Fun...Fun... FUN! Including : PRCA Rodeo, Sea Lion Splash, Demolition Derby, Truck Pull, Tractor Pull and Midway Music Stage

Located along the west shore of the Fox River, The Brown County Fair is a time-honored and cherished tradition for families and youth. Our goal is to teach urban and rural residents of all ages about Brown County's history, traditions, and accomplishments through agriculture, family living, and business. We strive to provide a welcoming environment for our guests and promote agriculture through exhibits and demonstrations, and are committed to supporting life-long learning for our youth and our community.

The Lincoln County Fair is an annual county fair and is a member of the Wisconsin Association of Fairs. It is completely volunteer organized and run. Our fair is a five-day event hosted in the city of Merrill Wisconsin the county seat of Lincoln county. We have a wide variety of different activities and events each day. Events range from various live music performances to carnival rides and many 4H judging competitions. If you are looking to enter your children's exhibits, ride some of our great rides, or just hang out and people watch, the Lincoln County Fair has something for you. Oh and did we mention the food? We don't like to brag but we have some of the best fair food around with more than 20 food stands and vendors working hard to bring you their best. We hope you have fun because our fair is a great place to come to hungry. Come on and enjoy the fair after all it is all about food and relationships. Whatever you're after come on down to the Lincoln County Fair and see if it's here. You won't be disappointed.
